Statement from Viola Edwards:

The Fife Ranch has been used as an agricultural ranch as long as I can remember. I went to the ranch and stayed with Beth Fife, a friend and neighbor in 1938 & 1939. I remember seeing the fields being irrigated at that time. The ranch was used to raise hay and cattle.

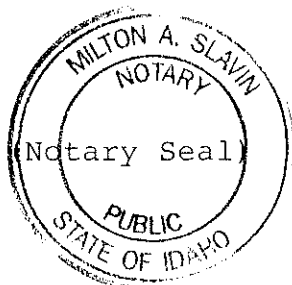

Since we were married in 1942, my husband Eugene and I have lived on the Edwards Ranch which neighbors (across the river) the Fife Ranch. In 1972, Eugene and I began leasing the Fife Ranch from the Fife children and had continued using the ranch for agricultural purposes until 1983 when our son Paul began leasing the ranch which he continues to lease to this day for agricultural purposes.

I, Paul Edwards, lease the Fife Ranch which is now owned by Dr. Jesse Cole of Butte, Montana. Before I began leasing the ranch in 1984, my parents Eugene and Viola Edwards had leased the ranch since 1972. I have been the irrigator using the waters from the S-15 ditch and Perreau creek for the purpose of irrigation on the Fife Ranch.

To Roxanne Brown,

This letter is written concerning the irrigation waters for the Fife Ranch which is now owned by Jesse Cole of Butte Montana. The ranch has been irrigated with waters from the Salmon River, Perreau Creek, Gorley Creek, and Spring Creek. Historically, water from Gorley Creek and Spring Creek have been used to irrigate the Fife Ranch, but due to the drought conditions the past several years, there has been no water to fill the irrigation ditch. When the water returns, we will use it again for irrigation.

One of the ditches we use on the Fife ranch is filled with run off water and sub water from the ranches above the Fife ranch. This ditch has been used as long as Paul Edwards has been irrigating that ranch, which he started doing in 1972. This ditch was in place at that time and has been used to irrigate the center of the ranch before it is returned to the Salmon river. We have called the ditch the Pump ditch simply because there had been a pump used in it to pump the water before we started leasing the ranch.
