Subject: ownership change-illegal injection

Hi Susan,

At our last meeting you suggested we contact you if we have any questions on the documentation for an ownership change. I have a parcel of land in my area that is being sold on contract. The new owner is listed at the county assessors office as the property owner. The new owner is also paying the taxes on the property. The old owner doesn't want the water right switched to the new owners until he gets all of his money. So who would be the owner?

The irrigation system on this property is illegally injecting surface water into the ground water. I've notified Dennis Dunn about this one and several others that are doing the same thing. And from the claimants comment this morning there are several more doing it out in this area. I explained to the claimant that if the Department levies a fine he would be responsible. Can we force the person that is purchasing the property to comply?
