To Whom It May Concern:

I have lived on our family farm on Marble Front Road in, Caldwell, Idaho, all of my 86 years. I have a personal memory of water being taken out of Mason Creek for irrigation from 19~~24~~³¹ to the present.

I remember conversations between my father and the neighbors that put irrigating out of Mason Creek as early as the 1860's.

The diversion of this water has been from two checks, one approximately a quarter of a mile south of Marble Front Road on Mason Creek and the other on Marble Front Road just west of KCID road.

I affirm that the statements in the above document are true to the best of my recollection.

An aerial photograph of a rural landscape, likely in the Midwest, showing a patchwork of agricultural fields in various shades of brown, tan, and green. A dark, winding river or stream flows through the upper left portion of the image. A blue grid is overlaid on the entire photograph. A yellow sticky note is placed in the center-left area, partially obscuring the landscape. The text on the note is handwritten in dark ink.

DIVERSION #1

This diversion is approximately ¼ mile up Mason Creek from Marble Front Road. This picture marked #1 is of the main check on Mason creek which diverts the water into picture #2 and a ditch that runs parallel to Mason creek, to the second check, picture #3. This check lets the water go straight into a delivery ditch or back into Mason Creek. This was fixed this way to help eliminate sand.

DIVERSION #2

This diversion is just North of Marble Front Road and West of Well's Road.
