Figure 1. The proposed model for the effect of the perceived effort on the perceived exertion. The model shows the relationship between perceived effort, perceived exertion, and the moderating effect of the perceived effort on the perceived exertion. The model is represented by the equation: $PE = f(PE, PE, PE)$.

[illegible]

The figure shows two horizontal tracks. The upper track consists of alternating segments of double-stranded DNA (represented by pairs of parallel lines) and single-stranded DNA (represented by single parallel lines). The lower track is a continuous double-stranded DNA segment. A vertical arrow labeled 'f' points from the upper track down to the lower track, suggesting a transformation or a specific biological process.

Figure 1. Schematic representation of the experimental design. The subjects were divided into two groups: the control group (C) and the experimental group (E). The control group (C) was divided into two subgroups: the control group (C) and the control group (C). The experimental group (E) was divided into two subgroups: the experimental group (E) and the experimental group (E). The control group (C) was divided into two subgroups: the control group (C) and the control group (C). The experimental group (E) was divided into two subgroups: the experimental group (E) and the experimental group (E).
