To Whom It May Concern:

We moved to Carver Creek in 1946, when I was 6 years old. At that time Dad was using water from Carver Creek to irrigate both sides of the creek. We lived and had an orchard on the north side.

Dad watered and grew hay on the small patch on the south side of the creek. When the new highway was built it cut the size of the flat considerable, but we continued to use the water to keep it green and the grass growing for some years. I don't remember if we were still using the water on that side of the creek when I sold it to Jim Rupp. I considered that the water rights were included in the property.
