RE SRBA Claim No 24-10727

Dear Mr & Ms Barney:

I have corresponded with you previously concerning the above-listed water right claim that you have filed in the Snake River Basin Adjudication. Representatives of the Idaho Department of Water Resources ("IDWR") and of the Wyoming State Engineer's Office have recently had the opportunity to meet and discuss your claim, as well as other similar claims.

As you know, IDWR considers your right to be a Wyoming water right, and filing a claim with the SRBA is not necessary, but is allowable under current Idaho law. Any recommendation provided to the SRBA Court by IDWR would only include the element(s) of your right that are actually located in Idaho. With regard to your water right, IDWR would only recommend the place of use element of your water right, with remarks indicating that this right is a Wyoming water right. Any description of elements of the right located in Wyoming would be for informational purposes only and would not be enforceable under Idaho law. Moreover, any recommendation issued by IDWR is limited to what is provided for in your Wyoming Certificate.

In the meeting between representatives of IDWR and the Wyoming State Engineer's Office, we were unable to resolve the discrepancies between how your right actually appears to be used in Idaho and how your Wyoming Certificate describes the right. If you are actually irrigating more acres than are provided for in your Wyoming Certificate, I would suggest that you contact Jade Henderson, Wyoming Water Superintendent, at (307) 279-3441 to discuss how you may be able to file for an enlargement of your water rights. IDWR does not have the authority to change the description of your water right and does not have the resources to determine the proper place of use.

Since any decree issued by the SRBA Court would essentially be duplicative of your Wyoming water right, the best course of action for you to take may be to withdraw your SRBA claim. A water right issued in Idaho is no more valid than a water right issued in Wyoming, and would carry no greater legal weight. Since the decision you make in this regard involves complicated multi-jurisdictional concerns, you may wish to consult your own attorney about it. If you wish to withdraw your SRBA claim, I have enclosed a Request for Withdrawal of Claim form for your convenience. IDWR will refund the filing fee that you submitted with your SRBA claim.

If you desire to move forward with your SRBA claim, additional information will likely be needed, such as deeds and potential title searches and surveys, to properly report your water right. This information will also be required by the State of Wyoming so that your Wyoming Certificate properly identifies the elements of your water right.

We are working closely with the Wyoming State Engineer's Office to make certain that your water right is accurately reported in both states. In that regard, we are mindful to attempt to prevent any additional burdens or costs upon claimants, along with making certain that you have properly recorded water rights that will be valid in the future.

Very truly yours,
