Dear Dept. thank you for your time in this serious matter. I have tried to show the continued efforts on our part to put this field in production . I am sorry we do not have better records of this project. My memory is not perfect, however, to the best of my recollection and according to my wife's entries, this information is accurate.

As I recall, we were not even permitted to drill a well for some period of time. Later we were told that if we proceeded it may well be that our investment would be for naught as the Department may well deny rights. Consequently we moved forward as fast and yet as carefully as seemed wise. To deny us of this right would be devastating to me.

Thank you

Bart Wride

We started
dry farming some of this ground in about 1976 with the idea of preparing it for irrigation. Sage brush takes a
while to decompose
where I live one
does not dry farm
for a living as it
rarely produces
enough to harvest.
So any field
preparation is for future irrigation purposes. This is the only field I ever dry farmed.

To Whom it May Concern:

Wride Farms purchased a Pratt Rockpicker from Pratt Farms in 1983 for the sum of $10,000.00.

To whom it may concern.

I, Dwight Hoarch, rented a bull dozer to the Wrides for the purpose of cleaning up some old potato cellars. This would have been in about 1983 or 1984. The amount charged as best as I recall, was around fifteen hundred dollars.
