June and I originally purchased the Lake Coeur d'Alene property in the spring of 1953. We began building the cabins that summer, and finished them the following summer. While I don't recall the exact day that our water pumping system was completed, I do know that we were drawing water from the lake when the cabins were completed in the summer of 1954. The latest that it would have been was August 31, 1954. From the summer of 1954 until we sold the property to you in 1991, we pumped our water for domestic use from the lake through a system that we installed.

Dated: September 14th, 2009

My parents, Clarence and June Olson, originally purchased the Lake Coeur d'Alene property that the Wurdemans now own in the spring of 1953. My parents began building the cabins that summer, and finished them the following summer. Our water for the cabins was pumped to the cabins from the lake. I do not remember the exact date that our water pumping system was completed, but I do know that it was working and we had indoor plumbing when the cabins were completed in the summer of 1954. The latest that it would have been was August 31, 1954. From the summer of 1954 until my parents sold the property to the Wurdemans, the water for domestic use was pumped from the lake through a system that my father installed. So far as I am aware, the Wurdemans continued to pump water from the lake for domestic use, and still do.
