Subject: RE: 27-12050

The irrigated land in the NSW doesn't lie above the ditch. If you look closely (turning off the pou and QQ lines) you can see the ditch as it runs west then north ~~on the south edge of the property~~. So the irrigated land would be below the ditch.

As far as the stock water. It should have the diverted water that goes into the ditch ~~that they drink from as well as the stream itself~~. The cattle would have access to both.

Cindy, I have added an irrigation POD to the recommendation for 27-12050 and removed the links to the POD for the instream stock water. Having made those changes I have a couple of questions. The stock water on the license is not instream stock water and does not appear to be instream on the claim. Why is instream stock water replacing diverted stock water? If the shape file for the irrigation point of diversion is correct there are a number of acres in the NSW that lie above the ditch. How are these being irrigated? Is it subirrigated?

The POD for irrigation wasn't on the data entry and I wouldn't have taken anything off of the ECVR without first consulting Cindy. As it said to Use claimed POD and Source as Recommended POD and Source, with a note to add instream stock, the only thing that i would have done, was to add instream stock. If you would like, I can fax a copy of the data entry information that you sent to us. Let me know if something else needs to be done with this claim to get the NOE and PDR correct.

Thank you,
Katy
