TABLE 6.1-1
Hard Rock Mining Water Consumption

Operation	Gross Water Use, gallons per ton	Net Water Use, gallons per ton	Comments
Drilling	--	2 – 5 gpm/hole	Per-ton usage highly variable – spacing, diameter, depth, orientation, explosive type/loading
Crushing (dust control)	--	1 – 6 nominal
Wet Screening	30 - 250	--	Gross use – once-through solids and water
Semi-Autogenous Grinding	475 – 700 nominal	125 – 200 nominal	Net use – net solids and net water makeup
Ball/Rod Mill	500 – 700 nominal	150 – 300 nominal

sand size material ($3/16$ inch to $1/4$ inch and below) is withdrawn with a sand screw (about half of the installations). b. As an alternative, the fraction passing through the screen may be classified according to size in a gravity classifier (about half of the installations) to recover the sand fraction.

Step 6. Clays and silts are sent to a settling pond, from which decanted water is returned for use in the process.

Overall, a typical sand and gravel plant might produce 70 to 80 percent of its processed material as gravel and 20 to 30 percent as sand. Clays and silts normally comprise less than 10 percent of a viable loose material deposit; the settled clay mass might contain around 5 percent solids and 95 percent moisture.

Table 6.1-2 summarizes water use in a typical sand and gravel plant.

Industrial Mineral Mining

A variety of minerals are mined for use in manufacturing, in construction, and for purposes other than heating value (coal) or metal recovery. Industrial mineral (“soft rock”) mining practices vary widely, according to the mineral produced and the nature of the deposits.

Two familiar examples of industrial minerals are kaolin (clay) and silica sand (used in glass making). Each is mined and processed with different methods. Kaolin clay mining and processing serve as an example. Kaolin is used

) CLAIM TO IDWR

Subcase 75-04485 was scheduled for an Initial Hearing on July 2, 1999. At hearing, claimant Grover explained this water right was erroneously claimed as a small domestic and stock right. Grover seeks to claim mining as an additional use for this right. Grover asked the court to remand this right to the Idaho Department of Water Resources to allow it to be included in IDWR's investigation and Director's Report with the irrigation and other rights in Basin 75.

Objector United States concurred that the right should be included in the Director's Report for Basin 75 irrigation and other rights, but reserved its right to object to the right.

IT IS RECOMMENDED that the Director's Report for 75-04485 which was included in the domestic and stock recommendations for Basin 75 be withdrawn and that water right 75-04485 be remanded to IDWR to investigate and report along with the other irrigation and other rights for Basin 75. Grovers shall submit an amended claim for this right within 30 days, and provide the court with a Notice of Compliance that the amended claim has been submitted. IDWR may notify the court if an amended claim for this right is not submitted.
