To whomever it may concern

I Verna Clark Comstock have been asked to write a statement about Freeze Cemetery.

My father Vernon J. Clark was part time care taker of Freeze Cemetery in 1950, full time in the summers of 1951-1952-1953.
The Freeze Cemetery had a well and pump, this enabled the care takers to use hose and sprinklers to water the cemetery. I remember the previous care taker Frank Bowers, who became ill, having my father, helping him move the sprinklers and mowing.

Washington Water Power came into Potlatch area in 1935. The farmers built the lines in some areas then sold the lines to WWP Co. Don's Dad George Comstock was an electrician, he climbed poles hooked up lines into houses. WWP Co. turned on the power January 1936

My parents Verna & Milledred Clark's home was the last farm going north where WW Power Co stopped. Later 3 or 4 years later REA came and put electrical lines in area that WWP hadn't served.

Earlier, George sold light plants and wired people's homes. He had a store in Palouse in the early 1920's. He also sold Ford cars Model T & F before farming. Geo only had an 8th grade education
