living there in 1899, and later sold his land to O. A. Purcell; Clark and Orval's father. The other homesteaders probably also helped to build the ditch. In later years the ditch was maintained mostly by the Purcells and the Woodlands. After 1970, it was maintained by the Tallents and the Woodlands. In 1982 all the water users on the ditch formed an association called the Lower Crane Creek Ditch Lateral Association, Incorporated. The object of that association was to improve and maintain the ditch. All users contribute to its maintenance and all benefit by having better control over the water. These users are very fortunate to have some of the best water rights in the State. They have ample water throughout the irrigating season.

Another very early ditch was called the James Adams ditch. It supplied water from Crane Creek to users on the south side of the creek. In the year 1903, it was in operation. The Theuer family (land first homesteaded by William Aldridge and sold to Theuer in 1904) profitted from this ditch. Also James K. Martin. His land later became part of the Theuer property. All that land is now owned by Kenny and RaNae Skow.

The very first homesteader in Lower Crane Creek Valley was James Norman Harris. His property was located on the south side of Crane Creek at its mouth. Harris had used Crane Creek water for many years before he filed his homestead claim. In the early 1900's many homesteaders came into the valley and started using Crane Creek water. Those above Harris took more than their share. In 1909 the water in Crane Creek was adjudicated. James Norman Harris was awarded the first water right on Crane Creek--27.85 miners inches. J. K. Martin and William Theuer the second right--19.87 and 13.56 miners inches respectively. The third right went to Wash Hinze--9.45 miners inches. The fourth right went to George Triplow, Applegate Brothers, and O. A. Purcell with 44.88, 18.47 and 42.25 miners inches respectively. The fifth right went to Ed Wilburn--4 miners inches. The sixth right went to George Kiser--29.36 miners inches. The seventh right to Ed Wilburn--22 miners inches and the eighth right to Crane Creek Irrigation Land and Power Company--11.76 miners inches. The final Decree was made April 10, 1913 and filed and entered April 22, 1913. About the time Crane Creek Reservoir was put in, ditch companies were formed so they could get reservoir water to water their lands. The first company to serve this valley was Crane Creek Irrigation. It was formed in 1909. The next company was Washington County Irrigation District which lasted from 1923 until 1938. Times were hard for the homesteaders during this time period. The old wooden flume, which carried water from the reservoir to the mouth of the Weiser River canyon, was abandoned. Farm prices were low because of a post World War I depression. Many of the homesteaders lost their land. Some of that land went to the Irrigation District which had a lien on property from those who did not pay their assessments. Washington County Irrigation District was dissolved in 1938. The Weiser Cove Irrigation District was formed in 1943, and a flood control district was formed in 1953. Later the water users in this valley pulled out from the Weiser Cove Irrigation District and formed the Crane Creek Independent Water Users Association which is still serving this area at this writing.

Many small ditches were put in by the early settlers, and remnants of those ditches are still apparent. The Purcell family extended their ditches to water all the bottom land near the river, and much of the Triplow--later called the old Boge Harris-- property was irrigated. Up the river on property homesteaded by Joseph Kiser and James Lewallen-- now owned by Phil Soulen--there are
