At the start of the meeting Rex Fuhriman, Jerald Grease, and John Rowley were wondering about the water on the Jackson ditch. Rex Fuhriman and Jerald Grease are interested in transferring their water rights to people that own the land now. The place was split up in 20 acre pieces and sold. John Rowley is one of those buyers. He owns two 20 acre pieces.

This is a separate ditch from the creek. So those their felt that they would have to get together and decide for themselves on what to do. This is what they felt they would do.

They ask about their water rights and were showed a chart of the various water right and showed that theirs started at 45 feet in the creek.

It was also decided that Rex Fuhriman and Jerald Grease do not have a vote and that John Rowley does have a vote for our creek meeting.
