Last Friday I visited this property to determine the extent of beneficial use. The surface right on this property appeared to only irrigate the lawn, so I am only recommending it that way; the gw right will be the primary right for this property if the recommendations hold. The well and irrigation system were in poor condition, and did not show signs of recent use. The pasture area was full of weeds, and was not fenced off from the home area. It would not make sense to irrigate pasture without cattle to graze it, and who would want cattle running thru their yard? However, the licensing exam was conducted in 1986, and the SRBA claim was filed in 1988. Since the system is still in place for irrigation, it would probably be difficult to successfully recommend disallowal of that portion of the right; I do not plan to contact Idaho Power in order to find out when the irrigation well was last used. The stockwater portion of the right appears to be unused also, but I probably cannot disallow that either. The irrigation well was measured at 0.40 cfs, and recommended at 0.34 cfs for 17 acres, but was only licensed for 0.20 cfs because the former owner only paid the minimum examination fee for 0.20 cfs (after filing proof 9 years late).
