To Whom It May Concern:

I was born in Montpelier, Idaho on August 5, 1923 and spent my youth there before attending college at the University of Idaho and serving in the Navy during World War II.

During the summer vacation in my teen years, I would live with my grandparents at the Three Mile Farm and help with the crops. One of my jobs was to help irrigate the wheat and alfalfa he raised. We would get our share of the water coming out from Dunn Canyon. As I recall, we would get the water for an assigned period (about once a week). My job was to rotate the water at the head of each row to get the proper coverage of the irrigated section of the farm land. I was able to help for about three or four summers.

P.S. Fond memories.
