1. dnelson 9/21/2006 Claim Review

This claim is based on a license, and will be recommended as licensed for all aspects of the claim, except for the acre description and the source. According to the field exam and the claim maps submitted, all the lands using this water are south of the drain. Therefore, I made my shape based on current mapping technology and found that the actual place of use bleeds over to the SWSW S33 and NWSE S32. There are still 65 total acres being recommended. None of the aerial photos actually show 65 acres being irrigated on this farm. There is closer to 45 actual acres being irrigated, but I cannot tell when or if the acre amounts changed from the time the licensing exam was done in 1971 until the time the aerial photos were taken. Therefore I am recommending the full 65 acres.

The source is listed as Whitney Drain, but the drain on the map does not appear to be named. I am assuming the local name for this drain is the Whitney Drain. I thought about changing this name, but to remain consistent with the license, I decided to leave the source name in place.
