Allen,

Paul is out of the office this week on a family vacation, so I will have to respond to your query without first consulting him.

Since our last communication with you, the parties have been working diligently toward settlement. I spoke to and traded emails with Paul last Thursday before he left for vacation, and we both believed that a settlement had been reached. We plan to have our clients execute the necessary documents—including a stipulation to withdraw the protest—next week when Paul returns to the office.

Paul, if you are checking your email, please confirm that you agree with my description of events, or correct me if I have misstated anything.

Mike

Gentlemen,

This matter was called up for review. As you may recall we were going to have a pre-hearing conference on 2/20/2014 but it was vacated at your request.

Please let me know if a settlement likely or if I need to reschedule the conference.

Thanks,

Allen
