All I had was the ownership change request and the map. The folks were here in the office when I did it so no acknowledgement letter is necessary. I figured it's the folks property and if they want to split it up, it's ok since all parts remain in their names for now. I believe the kids know what's been done – not that it's really any of their business at this point in time. Do you want a memo for the file? I say kudos to mom and dad for doing this sooner than later. Let me know....

Got the ownership for the kids to get some of the property. Asked a dumb question, and got jumped on, do you have anything from the Kirklands in writing that asked for the split? Other than the change of Ownership form. Seems the kids could come back and ask why we split it. Didn't see and acknowledgement letter either so maybe we could mention the purpose of the split in the acknowledgement letter.
