Darla,

Thank you for the information. Please change my request for this extension to April 1, 2013 to bring me up to the initial 5 year development period.

Thank you,

Mr. Shelton,

The proof due date on your permit was April 1, 2012, so one year from that date would be April 1, 2013. This is the date you would use if you are asking for the 1 year extension to bring you up to the initial 5 year development period.

Darla,

I'm sorry, I'm out of town and don't have access to the extension request I submitted. Could I trouble you for the expiration date of my original application that way I can respond with adding the additional year in the proper format

Regards,.

Darla,

Thank you for the information. I would like to stay within the Idaho statutes as you have indicated and change my request to add one year to the first four year development period. That way we would be entitled to another extension if needed.

Please let me know if you need anything else or have other suggestions.

Regards,

Dear Permit Holders:

Re: Permit No. 98-7873

Upon review of the extension request you filed, I noticed that you asked for 2 years in order to complete this project and put the water to beneficial use. Idaho allows an initial 5 year period to develop the use of a water right. After the end date of that 5 year period, only one Request for Extension of Time can be filed for up to 5 more years. You had four year period to develop under this permit. You would meet the initial 5 year development period if you were to ask for a 1 year extension on this extension request. This would allow you to be able to file an additional extension request later for up to 5 more years. If you feel you have the need to change the extension to date on this extension request, please respond to this email with the new extension to date you prefer. Please keep in mind that the proof of beneficial use due date is currently April 1, 2012, so your extension to date will start with the same month and day as the current proof due date.
