Subject: Licensing amendments for 78-7396 and 78-12159

78-7396 and 73-12159 were permitted for domestic and irrigation purpose of uses. The field examiner recommended that the irrigation portion of the right be recommended under the domestic purpose of use. However, the irrigation permitted under each right did not translate to $\frac{1}{2}$ acre per domestic lot as is the standard for domestic rights.

Because the exact irrigated acreage developed under each permit was not identified by the field examiner, in order to move forward toward licensing, the permitted acres for irrigation use had to be divided up equally among the number of lots that were being licensed.

For example, 78-7396 was permitted for 14.7 acres and 64 lots. In order to recommend irrigation as part of the domestic use, we had to distribute the 14.7 permitted acres evenly among the 64 lots. This limited irrigation on each lot to 0.23 acres. This limitation is described under conditions of approval.

Licensing amendments were sent to the permit holder reflecting this change from the original permit.
