Jeanie,

Is there any risk to the SNRA or the Water User if they do the closure before the written permit is in hand? The weather is closing in on the SNRA/Tribes being able to do the re-habilitation. On the other hand the Mahoney family is willing to have the work done and close their diversion BUT if something went wrong with the final paperwork they would no longer have the ability to irrigate that acreage. USFS is committed to help find a solution if there was something that went wrong BUT they really cannot go back and put this diversion back in place for Environmental Consultation issues that would be a legal quandary.

What are the risks before the final paperwork is complete from your office? Thanks so much for your help on this.

Karma,

There doesn't appear to be any protests and the deadline was 9/21/09. I believe this will be approved in the Region rather than sent to the State Office, which usually speeds things up a bit. It should be approved in the next few weeks at the most. I will talk to our manager and see about moving it along but feel free to check with me again if you haven't heard. Jeanie

Jean,

Did we draw any protests on this application? I couldn't see anything on the web site. If not, when will the water right be official? The SNRA is wanting to go up and close that ditch this fall while they still have funding and we need to make sure we won't jeopardize Mr. Mahoney's water right in doing so.

Thanks so much!
