I don't think excavating down into the water table will create enough water to do what they're wanting to do.

I don't what the effects will be on the water users below the described pond.

If the pond doesn't fill as they say it will then I'm sure they will go after water somewhere to fill it. So if it were to happen what I would recommend is that they use some of their dug-out water and dry some of their irrigated land up to supply the water to the pond. And then I'm not sure that it's right to the user and users of the Pahsimero Valley.
