Dear Sir:

Recently the watermaster in our area Cindy Yenter reviewed my water right application for final proof. Her determination was that some of the land was never irrigated so it would not have a water right. This is in error. Her determination was based on aerial photos ~~show~~ showing crops growing. It does not show land that was irrigated for the purpose of working and plowing the land. I am enclosing affidavits certifying that at one time all lands were irrigated. If the IDWR or Cindy Yenter have information showing different then we need to see it. If you have no information to the contrary then my license needs to be granted for the full acres or you can pay the damages.

Thanks for your quick review of Rupert Idaho, being first duly sworn, deposes and says:

I have an application for a water right (Permitt No. 36-8432). I have at one time applied water to all these lands under this application. Some lands were irrigated for the purpose of working and plowing the lands although they never produced crops. The irrigation system was in place (wherellines) and adequate water was produced by the well to irrigate the entire acreage.
