Dear Ms. Fleck,

I appreciate your help and patience in dealing with my water permits.

I didn't fill in the "acre-feet" blank because I was unable to reach an understanding on the amount.

The well is just for domestic household (1) use and has the usual $\frac{3}{4}$ " pipe outlet, etc.

Could you put in the appropriate figure?

Thank you,

Dear Mr. Corbin:

Re: Permit No. 97-7097

The paper work on this permit is still not correct. However, with the information provided in your letter and the previously submitted proof of beneficial use form, I've partially typed a proper proof form for the above referenced permit. Please fill in the information needed at the X's and return the proof form soon.

You have two kinds of water rights. A statutory claim - 97-4085 - is a form to document water uses with very early priorities. The priority for this right is July 1945. This type of documentation does not confirm a water right because the department does not verify the use, but rather makes a record of a water use with an early priority.

Water uses established after March 25, 1963 are recorded through an application/permit/licensing process. A person determines what water use is necessary and proposes it to the department for approval. If the application is approved, a permit is issued with a condition to notify the department at a certain time whether the proposed project has been completed. The time between when the permit is issued and when proof is due is the construction period and at the end of that construction period, the department requests verification that the project has been completed, or partially completed. This verification is the proof of beneficial use form.

After the proof form is submitted, the department will conduct a field inspection to determine the extent of use and issues a water right license. Because the department does a field inspection to determine the extent of use and issues a license of its findings, this type of right is confirmed, unlike a statutory claim. Note the difference between these types of rights if that one, the claim, is a record of a water use with an early priority and the licensed right is a confirmed right with an established priority after March 25, 1963.

I am sorry this confusion exists as the result of my assuming I was writing about the permit on state lot #129, Priest Lake, etc.

The letter from your office was forwarded to me in Arizona and I didn't have any records available and assumed the permit was on the cabin that uses the Horton Creek water.

The permit for the well use in Coolin appears to be 97-7097

And the one from Horton Creek is 97-4085.

I obviously fouled things up on the renewal.

I find a receipt from your department dated 7-13-82 for $30⁰⁰.

I don't know which permit that applied to.

Only one well in Coolin property is used and for one domestic cabin.

And the same for the Horton Creek permit.

Hoping you can straighten me out on this and thank you.

Dear Mr. Corbin:

Re: Permit No. 97-7097

Returned is the proof of beneficial use form submitted to this office on April 30, 1987.

Our records show that the permit proposes the use of water from a ground water (well) as the source of water for six households. The proof indicates that there is a use of water with Horton Creek as the source for one domestic.

Previous correspondence in the file indicates that there were two wells drilled, one hitting quicksand and one good one. Are you diverting water from this one well to serve six households?

If this is the case, please correct the enclosed proof form accordingly and return the form along with the proper fee. A fee is required for more than one domestic use with a greater water use than 0.04 for the combined uses. See the enclosed instruction sheet. If this is not the case, and your only water use is from Horton Creek you may wish to let this permit lapse and file for a water right permit for the Horton Creek domestic use.

If you have any questions concerning this matter, please feel free to contact me.
