I am against this transfer because every time we have a dry year the water table drops under the current load. I had to lower my domestic well already in 1991. There were wells last spring around me, where the pumps were actually lower than mine, and they went dry. I spoke to one person who had to lower his domestic well and it cost him $7000.

I have had my domestic well since 1985 and do not feel it is legal to give water I have filed on to someone else. An additional draw of 43 acre feet of water per year would definitely lower the water table in a dry year. My filing preempts this proposal, and I should not have to spend money to maintain an existing right because the water has been given to someone else.
