Re: Legal Notice

The legal notice for this statutory claim did not include a season of use for irrigation, had a misprint in the address, and indicated stockwater use where the applicant had written "domestic" use. However, I do not think this set of omissions and/or discrepancies warrants the cost of re-publication. First, the irrigation season is intuitive; it can be guessed, more or less, by any knowledgeable reader. Second, the misprint in the address is not critical because exceptions are mailed to IDWR, not to the claimant. Third, other information on the claim caused IDWR to interpret the "domestic" use as actually being for stock watering; the two uses are similar in diversion rate and consumption anyhow.
