Dear Mr. Hannula,

Thank you for your message requesting additional time. I will allow you 90-days to attain the information needed. From speaking with you on the telephone, I understand that acquiring the needed information will be very complex and involves several parties. This will ensure that you have additional time. If I haven't received anything from you after the 90 days, I will contact you to see if you would like to extend the time more.

Thank you

Mr. Dan Nelson,

In a letter dated September 21, 2004, you requested some additional information regarding the subject transfer. I have had several meetings with Brighton and they are making good progress toward answering all of your questions. There are a few more unresolved questions at this point and they have asked for more time to get all of the correct documentation aligned.

With this e-mail, I would like to request an extension of time by which to answer your questions. I think that we can get your questions addressed within 60 days.
