$$64 - 42.25 = .1186 \text{ cu ft/lin ft} \times 343 \text{ ft} = 40.68 \text{ cu ft.}$$

Placed 60 bgs of class A-B cement, @ 47940 cu ft/bag dry 6 gal H₂O = .801 cu ft =

$$1.28 \text{ cu ft bag slurry} \times 60 = 76.82 \text{ cu ft. of cement slurry.}$$

This is approx 47% excess over what a perfect hole would take. It is usually acceptable to figure approx 30% wastage on bore volume to displace but have up to 100% excess of the bore volume on site ready to pump if cement does not make it to the surface.

From Boley Jr. + Leal's description 76.82 cu ft. of cement slurry was dumped into the well, a proportional volume of water to displace the cement out of the 6" casing was pumped and the cement went? Apparently no cement was seen at the surface between the 6 + 8 inch casing. Apparently Boley Jr. feels a good seal was established at the bottom of the 6" casing.

This is a possibility although it does not explain what was done to get the feeling. Clay at 324'-341'? When they were drilling to 343' they had no LCZ's?

SUBJECT Kestler and Sanbury Wells

I really don't have any specific comments on these logs. I visited Bob and Henry several times while they were drilling Kestler's well and they also saved some cuttings for me. The lithologies look good based on what I've seen. The 8" casing is not cemented. Blaine's "Halibuton Method" is to dump the grout into the well and pump the column's amount of water into the wells and this forces the grout into the well. He said that Sid Tomlinson taught him how to do it.

If you have any questions let me know.

This Panbury Hot Springs well was drilled in about 1927. There is no log on the top 273 feet of this well. It has some 8" casing in it and it looks fairly heavy. It was pumped, but I don't know what the yield was. It flowed about 10 G.P.M. when we began working on the well and this same flow is still coming out, we had hoped to shut it off when we cemented in the six inch casing but apparently the cement didn't come up that far between the 6 and 8" casings.

We did cement in 344 feet of 6" casing using the Haliburton Method. 60 bags cement with 6 gallons of water to the bag were used. We felt we got a good seal.

Most of the flow was found in the bottom part of the hole.
