RE: Water Right No. 86-7077

Dear Water Right Holder(s):

I received your correspondence concerning what happens to your water right should you decide to sell your property.

In Idaho, a licensed water right is considered real property; therefore, proof of owning the land is proof of owning the water right unless you specifically exclude it in the sales agreement. You or the new owner may notify our office of the change in ownership and we will place the information in the file.

If you have any questions, please let me know.

Dear Mrs. Batterton:

Re: File No. 86-7077 ✓

As requested in your letter of August 1, 1979, enclosed is a copy of your permit No. 86-7077 for domestic and irrigation purposes from a groundwater source.

While the doctrine of "first in time is first in right" is recognized, it is required that your well be at a depth which is considered to be a reasonable groundwater pumping level. If your well is less than what is considered to be a reasonable economic pumping lift, your first recourse is to deepen your well before further action can be taken.

The intent of the water law is to allow full economic development of the groundwater resource. If a neighboring well is causing interference with a well having an earlier priority date, then, based upon sufficient evidence that the neighboring well is causing the interference, the owner of the interfering well may have to pay the cost of deepening the injured well. Unfortunately, the burden of proving the interference on injury rests with the injured party. The civil court would make the final determination and not the Department of Water Resources. The water right for the injured well would provide invaluable evidence for the court to determine the "first in right."

Sincerely,

Robertta Garrett
