venor John C. Whitehead, appellant's predecessor in interest aforesaid, filed a petition and complaint in intervention, wherein he claimed the right to 160 inches of water on lands not affected in this suit, and in addition 8 miner's inches of water for garden and orchard. (See F.485, also defendant's exhibit 1) At the time of this suit and decree said John C. Whitehead had a home on the land on which the springs herein involved were used, built in 1900, according to testimony introduced on behalf of appellant in the instant case, (F.105) and had used the waters from these springs in said home from the year 1900, and had used the waters to irrigate said orchard and garden from the year 1883. (F.85 & 91) Yet in spite of these alleged facts, in the final decree entered in said action, said John C. Whitehead was only allowed a flood water right of 2.5 cubic feet per second to use on other lands than those mentioned in the instant case, but was not allowed any water for use on said garden or orchard, although it is now claimed he had used said water from said springs to irrigate said garden and orchard for 22 years before the entry of said decree in 1905, and had had water piped into his home for five years before the entry of said decree. The rights and priorities decreed in that decree were as follows: (Appellants' exhibit "A")

To Franklin Maple Creek Pioneer Irrigation Company, a corporation, 6.8 cubic feet per second in said Maple Creek, as of date of 1860.

To the Dixie Bench Ditch, 3.98 cubic feet per second, as of the date of 1862.

To John Gayman, .2 cubic foot per second, as of date 1872.

To the Flack Ditch 5.45 cubic feet per second as of date 1876.

To the Franklin Maple Creek Pioneer Irrigation Company, a corporation, ¹/₄ cubic feet per second, as of date 1877.

To William Woodward, .8 cubic feet per second, as of date, 1881.

To Levi Oliverson, .6 cubic feet per second as of date, 1882.

To Joseph Catterton, et al, 11.4 cubic feet per second as of date, 1883.

To John C. Whitehead, 2.5 cubic feet per second as of date of 1887.

To Franklin Maple Creek Pioneer Irrigation Company, a corporation, 4 cubic feet per second, as of date, 1887. 1887

To Samuel Morgan, 4 cubic feet per second, as of date, 1894.

So that in the decree in the Flack case in 1905, 41.73 cubic feet per second of the waters of Maple Creek were awarded to various claimants, while through most of the irrigation season each year, there was not enough water flowing in said creek to provide sufficient water to satisfy the first primary right in said creek of 6.8 cubic feet per second, and of this amount 31.23 cubic feet per second were prior to those allotted to said John C. Whitehead, predecessor in interest to appellant herein as aforesaid.

The springs involved in this controversy, are known and referred to throughout these

Dear Sir:

As officers of the Franklin Maplecreek Pioneer Irrigation Company, we are filing this protest on the notice of claims listed above which were published in the Preston Citizen May 31, 1995.

All tributaries of the Maple Creek have been filed on by our company as first water right users; with the Dixie Bench Ditch as second right users; and with John Gayman and the Flack Ditch as third and fourth water right users. In total there have been eleven water rights filed on Maple Creek. (See Supreme Court ruling enclosed, pages 6 & 7) These waters have been decreed and allocated out to these various ditch companies and their stockholders for irrigation purposes.

In reference to #13-04321, the Deep Creek is actually a tributary of the Maple Creek.

We are filing this protest in order to protect the waters which rightfully belong to our stockholders.

SINCERELY,

FRANKLIN MAPLECREEK PIONEER IRRIGATION CO.
