5. Description of diverting works:

There is a headgate in Branch Creek that diverts water through a ditch. The water is released into Battle Creek. The water travels approximately 25ft through Battle Creek where we redirect it out through a pump. The rediversion system was put in around 10 years ago. Originally, Branch Creek water was diverted further uphill to the west and was diverted through a ditch and used for flood irrigation historically.

From the pump, water is diverted through an enclosed and pressurized pipe to the north and south. Water is used to irrigate by handlines and pivots.
