5. Description of diverting works:

Historically, water from an unnamed spring was diverted into a canal that no longer exists. West Cache Canal was built in its place. Instead of diverting the unnamed spring into the canal, a culvert was installed to let the unnamed spring flow naturally into Bear River. West Cache Canal Company has exchanged the point of diversion of the unnamed spring water into Bear River at the head of the canal system. This portion of the unnamed spring water is conveyed through the West Cache Canal and removed from the Canal for use through two weirs.
