5. Description of diverting works:

Spring water is piped to the houses. One spring is used as a backup source for when the main spring is running low. There is a valve that I can open if need be. The irrigation water is both piped and ditched to our property. A small pond on our ditch system collects the water and gives us the pressure we need to run the sprinklers. Everything is pressurized with gravity.

12. Remarks:

Priority Date Explanation:

This is the date given on the license. My grandfather was Albert Sant. He developed and licensed the water in 1925. Originally the spring supplied his home and irrigation uses. There was one home and flood irrigation on our system. In the 1960s my father switched from flood to sprinkler irrigation. In 1975 I built and added my home onto the system. The spring we were using originally was petering out. So around the time I built my house, I also added on another spring that produced enough to meet our needs. We have never exceeded the licensed amount of water for our uses. Currently the older home has been vacant for about 30 years.
