Skyler Gilbert

Mr. Gilbert, In March of 1972 I purchased the Arthur Stevenson Dairy farm located in Linrose, west of Preston, Idaho. In the fall of 1971 I plowed and prepared the acreage for seeding on the north end of the farm. This acreage (approximately 60 acres) bordered the highway from Preston to Dayton, Idaho. In the early spring of 1972 I planted alfalfa with a cover crop of oats. Because this new seeding required irrigation I purchased two wheel line sprinklers for irrigation of the acreage and started irrigating the new seeding by the end of March that same year. The water for this irrigation came from springs flowing into a pond, then pumped into the sprinkler lines. This was the water right Arthur Stevenson had when I purchased the farm and was part of the farm purchase. He had been flood irrigating from the same pond for many years. When I sold this same acreage in 1980 it came with the sprinklers and water rights.
