5. Description of diverting works:

This property is part of a large community water system that has been built over many years. A series of canals connect Thomas Fork to Muddy Creek, Dry Creek, Cooper Spring and Soren Canyon Creek. The property was originally flood irrigated, with its diversion point in the canal, but when the system was converted to sprinklers, the diversion point was moved to Muddy Creek itself. The canal where the original diversion was leaves Muddy Creek upstream from where we now currently divert water from. We use a pump in the creek to pull water out and sprinkle our ground with water. To my knowledge, this water right did not pull directly from Thomas Fork originally, but was fed through the system of canals and streams that has been established.
