

12/15/1945 Aerial Image

An aerial photograph of a coastal area, likely a wetland or marsh. A red boundary line is drawn on the image, enclosing a specific region. The boundary starts on the left, follows a winding path along a water body, then turns inland, following a series of irregular shapes. The terrain within the boundary shows various textures, including what appears to be water, mudflats, and possibly some vegetation. The overall image is in grayscale, typical of older aerial photography.