Re: measurements on Salmon River and tributaries

I have attached a compilation of measurements taken at irrigation diversions within the Salmon River Basin over a period of several years. These measurements have been taken by various agencies and provide measurements during drought years as well as normal water years.

The largest amount of data is within the Lemhi River drainage. This is due to the fact the Lemhi is a decreed stream and is under watermaster control. There are also a number of ongoing projects related to anadromous fish recovery within this drainage.

This data may be useful in upcoming adjudication claim investigations as well as providing some historical records of water use at the diversions.

There is limited information available on the types of equipment used in these measurements, however in contacting some of agencies, most measurements were conducted utilizing flow meters such as Price Pygmy meters or Swoffer flow meters.

I will continue to update these measurements with information I obtain form the various agencies and with measurements completed by myself or other agency personnel on a yearly basis. I have also attached an explanation of the abbreviations used in this report.
