Dear water users,

The la Nina weather pattern continued through out 2011. I didn't start measuring wells until June 1st. There was no irrigation prior to that time due to the cold wet spring. Again the rains delayed the irrigation season even later than last year.

With the late spring and almost daily rain, ground water supplies were adequate for summer irrigation with no reported water shortages.

I measured the same wells as in 2010. The water levels were similar to the 2009 and 2010 levels; however, usually the lowest levels occur during the week of July 24th. But this year that didn't happen until the August 30, measuring. This is the first year I remember that happening. I'm not sure of the reason, but it may have to do with the cold, prolonged spring. Whatever the reason water levels didn't start to rebound until September and October.

I took my last measurements October 5th 2011. I've listed my expenses for 2011 while monitoring the wells of the Bancroft-Lund water district.
